Citizen Labs at the library: the LABBBs methodology

Citizen laboratories are spaces where people can come together to experiment and create, in a collaborative way, projects that improve life together. The objective of this workshop is to explain why it is interesting to implement it in libraries.

The methodology proposed by the LABBBs project will be discussed and participants will learn what it means to set up a laboratory: how to face this challenge, what human and material resources are needed, how much work it requires. The workshop will have a practical part, where we will divide into small groups to explore all the elements to take into account when setting up a library laboratory.